

What is the real cost of non-standardized storage practices?

What is the cost of expertise that depends on a single person, a poorly monitored site, or an alert addressed too late?

These costs are real, but rarely measured: lost time, operational risks, reliance on key expertise, and added mental workload for teams.

To quantify this reality, Javelot surveyed 26 grain storage organizations and their operational managers.

Their feedback shows that Store&save delivers value precisely where productivity needs to be secured and risks kept under control.

This chart highlights this invisible yet critical value creation, which is essential to long-term performance.
